"Isn't it true, Mr. Swaney," asked Attorney Brownfield, "that you and Mr. Friedman are not the best of friends?"

"No, sir," replied witness Swaney. "He helped me in a horse trade once, but I wouldn't let a little thing like that interfere with my friendship."

School Children Can't Afford Handicaps

In a remarkable test, recently made under the supervision of the State Board of Health of Minnesota, over 9000 school children were questioned as to what they ate for breakfast.

A large percentage of the breakfasts consisted of coffee, bread and butter; coffee and oatmeal or some other cereal; coffee and hotcakes; coffee and biscuits; coffee and coffee cake, or coffee alone. Probably the same conditions prevail everywhere throughout the country.

"IS IT ANY WONDER," SAYS THE EXAMINING PHYSICIAN, "THAT 23 PER CENT OF THESE CHILDREN HAVE FREQUENT HEADACHES?"

He was thinking of the chief cause—coffee. And it IS no wonder when we consider that coffee contains the powerful drug, caffeine, a nerve poison and notorious cause of headaches, heart trouble, sleeplessness, irritation, and other ills!

Parents often wonder why their children are sickly, dull and backward in school, when frequently the cause lies in the homely, accepted habit of giving them a beverage containing an insidious poison.

When scientists and Boards of Health everywhere are speaking out against the dietetic dangers to which children have been so long subjected, it is high time that parents take heed and correct these conditions. No child should be permitted to use coffee. It is easy to furnish them instead the pleasant, pure food-drink—

Instant Postum

Made from wheat, roasted with a bit of wholesome molasses, Postum contains the goodness of the grain and is a most delicious beverage, economical, convenient and free from coffee drugs or any other harmful substance.

Postum comes in two forms: The original Postum Cereal, which has to be boiled; Instant Postum—soluble—made in the cup with hot water—instantly. They are equally delicious, and the cost per cup is about the same for both kinds.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 9, 1915.

A JAY ARGUMENT.

The Free Wool arguments of Editor Jay O'Donnell ought to be copyrighted by the Barefoot Syndicate and circulated through Greene and Washington counties for the enlightenment of the Democratic Jays of that section. There was a time in its golden career when Greene county raised nothing but sheep and Democrats. The farmers of that county recall only too well the fact that the Democratic Tariff of 1903 let in such a flood of foreign wool that domestic wool growing became unprofitable and the sheep on a thousand hills were sold for mutton at 50 cents to $1 per head.

But we are told by Editor Jay O'Donnell, the famous agriculturist and worker in wool, that Free Wool was demanded in the interest of the Common People who were paying the wool tariff in the price of their blankets and clothing. The Common People also recall with considerable disgust that they continued to pay the same old prices for their blankets and clothing, so that the net effect of Free Wool was a ruined sheep industry and a depleted public treasury.

The Democratic statesmen and the Democratic editors are profoundly and unchangeably ignorant of the Tariff. They do not seem to learn by study or profit by experience. What they lack in information they make up in invention, and when they run out of argument they fall back on abuse.

The most recent deliverance of Editor Jay O'Donnell on the wool question, for example, ignores the facts of history, but it cannot shut out from the minds of Greene and Washington counties the Democratic party made gains out of the sheep.

NLOT MACHINES SIKED.

The Westmoreland county officials have just cleaned up the slot machines and spiked the gambling devices. Fifteen men were penalized in stiff fines and told that they appeared before the court again on a similar charge they would get the limit of the law. The Greensburg Tribune comments on the matter as follows:

"In the years gone by our judges have pronounced sentences on men who kept and operated gambling devices and at the same time sounded warning in all others dealing to engage in the business of making money easily. Regardless of the warnings given, in store keepers during recent years other men who could not resist the temptation of making money with gambling devices persisted in keeping their machines going in a quiet manner. An automatic gambling device is a machine into which people drop coin with the expectation of winning a prize in the form of a cigar or another article of value, but which does not present the articles every time the device is operated. Machines which give out a stick of chewing gum for a cent are slot machines, but they are not gambling devices."

Some of these gambling devices are being operated in Fayette county. The proprietors had better be warned by the experience of their Westmoreland county neighbors.

POPULATION ESTIMATES.

In an effort to justify its rather reckless and improvident census "estimate" of 20,000 population for Uniontown, the Uniontown Organ calls to witness the fact that the school enrollment this year is 3,300. The census "estimate" of Connelville's population at 14,000, but Connelville has 2,000 school children.

If the school enrollment is a true test of population in Uniontown then we find that the ratio is 6 to 1. Applying that ratio to Connelville's population should be "estimated" at 15,000 instead of 14,000. But the Connelville ratio seems to be about 5 to 1 at which rate the population of Uniontown would be 14,000, which is probably a liberal estimate.

Uniontown has passed through a long and deleterious period of inflation, and the habit is still strong upon its newspapers.

DEMOCRATIC REFORM.

The Democratic organs are telling the taxpayers of Fayette county how the Democrats will reform the court house administration. If entrusted with the county office, they made the same plan in 1912, when in their Bull Moose Platform they pledged themselves to efficiency and economy in the administration of the federal government, and they have completely failed to redeem that pledge. There were too many Deserving Democrats in reward. It would be the same way in Fayette county.

A SUMMER NOT SO BAD.

The weather has always been regarded as a safe subject to talk about, but not this summer. The Good Old Summer of 1915 has been worshipping at the shrine of Saint Swiftness until it is maturated and soggy with moisture and drips water on the slightest occasion. Though almost continuous in action the rains in this section have for the most part been gentle, and have not been characterized by the floods and cyclones which have visited other sections of the country.

The summer has not been without other compensations. It has produced record crops in garden, field and orchard. Lightning strokes have been rare, heat prostrations few and health conditions generally better than usual. The pest of flies has almost missed us. The great majority of people who were not permitted to have any summer vacation found consolation in the fact that the weather was cool enough at home.

Summer is not quite over, however. It does not officially end until September 21.

SIAG DELIVERIES.

The fact that furnace slag deliveries to Connelville street paving contractors have held up work here at least twice this summer recalls the fact that the ironmen and the railroads are having a violent controversy over the question of getting rid of this by-product hitherto classed as waste material. One would think that when purchases were found willing to pay a price covering freight and leaving something for the producer that better attention would be given to slag deliveries.

The News has discovered that the country is a prosperous and wonders why the Republican papers won't admit it. Republican newspapers generally, and The Courier particularly, has been telling the story of our war prosperity weekly and daily ever since it began with the beginning of 1915.

Foreign mail matter is very uncertain of delivery.

The retirement of the Grand Duke Nicholas as the commander of the Russian forces removes the biggest man in the army. Czar Nicholas is not so tall as his cousin. It remains to be seen whether he is as big.

Now that Nicholas faces William, perhaps there will be something different doing on Russian soil.

Prophecy tell us the European war will not be over for a couple of years. Others just as reliable say it may end as quickly as it began. The United States is undoubtedly profiting by this war, but public sentiment here earnestly hopes for early peace.

After 4,000 years China is about to develop its coal fields.

The Austro-Hungarian Ambassador's explanation of his attitude toward the manufacture of war munitions in America was deemed so important that President Wilson delivered it personally to Secretary Lansing. President Wilson, however, is nothing if not democratic, on occasions. The only time his democracy fails him is when a Tammany man wants to shake hands.

Auto wrecks are getting so common that they excite but passing interest and frequently fail to make the first page.

The garbage question remains unfinished business.

The Uniontown Standard's editorial page is being covered with special features with the evident intent of attracting the attention of the reader. Is it possible that Editor Jay O'Donnell's brilliant effusions need reinforcement?

The vote were the biggest thing about most of the cases tried in criminal court this week.

The outstretched legs across the sidewalk is the open door to the hospital. The jokes of small boys are sometimes more dangerous than they realize.

The basement of the city hall is being fumigated for the election, but that is no reason why anybody should make mean remarks.

There won't be any straight tickets at the city election. The order of the names on the ballot indicates that all will be badly mixed.

The only man who is in danger of marking his ticket wrong at the coming city primary is the man who doesn't need any information or advice.

Scotdale is paving some streets this summer. It's a habit with our progressive neighbor.

The German steamers President Lincoln and George Washington are interned at New York with their crews. Who says Germany is not our great and good friend?

The Democrats admit that their Tariff law needs revision, and they propose to revise it themselves, but the country is tired of Democratic Tariff tinkering.

Fayette county's Good Roads program is being pushed. It has several thousand automobile horse power behind it.

The big tomato continues to outweigh every other commodity.

Some of the Democratic arguments are "all cry and little wool."

The Democratic organs are telling their readers daily about the trouble Bill Crow is having in nominating a Republican ticket, but they're not a patchin' to the trouble Bruce Stegman will have in electing his Democratic ticket this fall.

The Connelville city primary will be non-partisan none.

Editor Jay O'Donnell of the Uniontown New Freedom Standard demonstrates that he can write a wild and woolly editorial column.

In Berlin it is said that the von Tirpitz party caused the sinking of the Hesperian. Chancellor, von Bethmann-Hollweg, who wants peace with America.

Ty Cobb

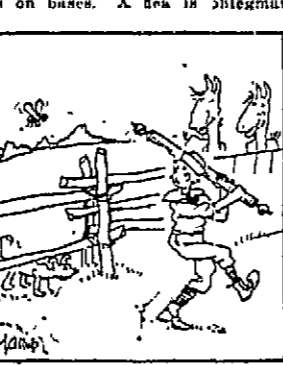

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Swast."

Ty Cobb is Henry Ford's assistant in the job of keeping Detroit in the headlines.

However, he does not make automobiles. He merely wins one now and then. He is a gambler by profession—the highest price award is in the world. There is no sweeter music to a Detroit citizen's ears than a hurrah note from Ty Cobb's but in the seventh inning with three men on base and the other side a run or two ahead. Cobb couldn't get Detroit's ball park once in a lifetime, but Cobb has been doing it for ten years.

Cobb is a very young man, not yet old enough to become a senator. He was born in Georgia and spent his youth battling humpbacks with a broomstick. Later, he practiced hitting home runs with a curling ball and gradually became so proficient that he could pick a slim-waisted walking stick and bank two bases out of a rifle ball most any time. He then joined the Detroit baseball team and began to upset standards on batting averages.

Cobb has been almost as dextrous on pitchers as he is on batters. He is not only a fast runner, but a fast thinker. He is not only a fast runner, but a fast thinker. He is not only a fast runner, but a fast thinker.

He practiced hitting home runs with a curling ball.

beyond this eminent young example of southern lineage. His most prominent address is half way between first and second bases making faces at the pitcher. He can run faster than a ducky chased by a graveyard and has a way of lying down when approaching second and feeling for the base with his versatile and prehensile feet which is very corrosive on the nerves of the opposing catcher and baseman. Cobb steals twice as many bases as any other man in the business. This is because, like every other Georgian, he is passionately fond of home and begins suffering from nostalgia whenever he gets on first base.

Cobb is a quick-tempered young man and breaks into the police reports now and then by mooning up a spectator who has called him names. This is considered to be a great fault. However, the baseball-going public needs Ty Cobb on the diamond. The spectator who throws his good breeding away with his club seat will be entering the bleachers needs more strenuous education than can be given him by a million editorials on good sportsmanship.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Physicians Recommend the Use of Magnesia.

Sufferers from indigestion or dyspepsia should remember that the presence of gas or wind in the stomach invariably indicates that the stomach is troubled by excessive acidity.

This acid causes the food to ferment and the fermenting food in turn gives rise to noxious gases which distend the stomach, hamper the normal functions of vital internal organs, cause acute headaches, interfere with the action of the heart and charge the blood stream with deadly poisons, which in time must ruin the health. Physicians say that to quickly dispel a dangerous accumulation of wind in the stomach and to stop the food fermentation which creates the gas, the acid in the stomach must be neutralized and that for this purpose there is nothing quite so good as a teaspoonful of pure bicarbonate of soda taken in a little water immediately after meals. This instantly neutralizes the acid, thus stopping fermentation and the formation of gas, and enables the inflamed, distended stomach to proceed with its work under normal conditions. Bismarck magnesia is obtainable in powder or tablet form from any druggist; but as there are many different forms of magnesia it is important that the bicarbonate which the physician prescribes should be distinctly asked for.—Adv.

RAILROAD BUYING NOT OF INTEREST TO STEEL TRADE

Just Now Mills are Running on Profitable War Orders.

PRICE OF RAILS MAY ADVANCE

Some Plants Are Rolling Rounds for European Guns and Ordinary Business
Is Not Particularly Attractive; Roads
May Be Forced to Act.

The railroads have been conspicuously absent from the steel market as buyers lately, says the American Metal Market. They purchased rails for this season's delivery on a very conservative scale, taking in the aggregate only a trifle more than they did for 1914, a year in which the total production of rails, standard, light and girder rails as well as rails for export, was less than half the tonnage produced in 1907, eight years earlier, the 1904 output being a shade under 1,000,000 tons while the 1914 output was less than 2,000,000 tons. The railroads have been very light buyers of structural material this year, as they have done relatively little in bridge and viaduct work, with scarcely anything in large stations. In freight cars there was a spurt in buying in May and June, the two months showing 60,000 freight cars ordered, about two-thirds of this being domestic buying. In July and August the orders have not totaled 10,000 cars for the two months. The question now is what the railroads will do for the future. The latest talk is that they are canvassing the steel situation, observing the possibility that if they do not buy early for 1915 they may not get what they will actually need. Since 1907 the situation has been that the railroads could secure rails whenever they needed them, there being a large surplus in rail making capacity, compared with the average production in that past few years. Now there is a wholly new element, the rolling of large rounds on rail mills, for ammunition. This is running into a very large tonnage. At least five rail mills, probably more, are rolling large rounds as a result of large orders, and are of course returning much higher prices than they could for rails, unless something occurs that has not occurred for more than 14 years an advance in the price of rails.

For cars, bridges, viaducts, buildings, etc., the railroads have always felt there would be a plentiful supply of plates and shapes as long as they themselves were not heavy buyers for it has been traditional in the steel trade that full market activity could not be expected unless the railroads figured rather extensively. Now the condition is changed for the steel trade is busy without the aid of railroad buying. It matters not that the structural mills, for instance, are operating at far less than their finishing capacity, because the steel is going elsewhere, and the limit in steel production is by no means the finishing capacity of the various mills. It is the capacity to produce steel ingots. The steel can all be finished and the most profitable units kept under pressure, even if several finishing lines are not especially active.

Any considerable buying by the railroads in the next few weeks can be attributed to a desire to buy steel when it can be bought rather than as provision against large war orders already felt, for as a matter of fact the railroads are having no difficulty at all in handling the freight and passenger business offered them. There are many idle cars and even if all should be engaged during the crop moving season the idle cars would reappear thereafter unless there is a very material increase in the general industrial activity of the country in the next few months.

For the more distant future the railroads may easily become very large buyers of steel again depending largely upon supply of capital. The Pennsylvania has expended extensively with larger freight cars 110,000 pounds carrying capacity and above, against the generally recognized maximum of 100,000 pounds, and the Baltimore & Ohio has done something along the same line. The major portion of the track of the country will not stand such cars without rapid deterioration of the rails. The Pennsylvania indeed in this year laying a considerable tonnage of 125-pound rails. In the neighborhood of ten years ago there was a general relaying of track in the United States, because the rails were too light for the heavier service involved in heavy locomotives and heavy freight cars, the latter weighing with load about 110,000 pounds. In years to come we may have another period of the same sort, 85 and 100-pound rails being replaced by 125 and 150-pound rails. There may also be extensive use of steel ties and electrification at such a rapid rate as to involve hundreds of thousands of tons annually of steel.

PETEX DINK—Mabel Was Saving Up a Shock, You See.

By C. A. Volght.

"What Sephenjah P. Baumgartner, Senior, hath fined together, let nobody put at hunder, bogoshens!" he announced.

The preceding appeared to be painful to Sefly, but not to Sally. She frankly accepted the situation and promptly put into action its opportunities for coquetry. She begged him, first, with consummate aplomb, to aid her in adjusting her parcels more securely, insisting upon carrying them herself, and it would be impossible to describe adequately her allurements, her electrical touches, halfcoyness, half-dance, the confidential whisperings, so that the wily old man in the rear might not hear; the surges up against him; the recoveries—only to surge again—these would require a mechanical contrivance which reports not only speech but action—and even this might easily fail, so subtle was it all.

"Sefly, I thought it was his old watch he was auctioning off. I wanted it for—for a not-egg! Ah-ha-ha! You must excuse me."

"You wouldn't be bid at all if you'd known it was me, I reckon," said Sefly.

"Yes, I would," declared the coquette. "I'd rather have you than any neat-egg in the whole world—any two of 'em!"—and when he did not take his chance—"if they were made of gold!"

But then she spoiled it.

"It's worse fellows than you, Sefly," the touch of coquetry was but too apparent.

"And better," said Sefly, with a lump in his throat. "I know I ain't no good with girls—and I don't care."

"Yes!" she saved him wickedly. "There are better ones."

"Sam Fritz!"

Sally looked away, smiled, and was silent.

"Sally Sefly!" she finally said.

"If he does think of salt mackerel, and 'most always drunk!" Sally went on bitterly. "He's nothing but a molasses-tapper!"

Sally began to drift further away and to sing. Calling Fritz names was of no consequence—except it kept Sefly from making love to her while he was doing it—which seemed foolish to Sally. The old man came up and brought them together again.

"Och! so 'long and make love some more. I like to see it. I expect I am an old fool, but I like to see it—like all times—like it you don't look out there, Sefly, I'll take a hand myself—yass! go 'long!"

He drew them very close together, each looking the other way. Indeed he held them there for a moment, roughly.

Sefly stole a glance at Sally. He wanted to see how she was taking his father's odiously intimate suggestion. But it happened that Sally wanted to see how he was taking it. She laughed with the frankness of joy as their eyes met.

"Sefly! do—like you," said the coquette. "And you ought to know it. You lumpy!"

Now this was immensely stimulating to the bashful Sefly.

"I like you," he said—"over since we was babies."

"Sefly! I don't believe you. Or you wouldn't waste your time so—about Sam Fritz!"

"Er—Sally—where you going to tonight?" Sefly meant to prove himself.

And Sally answered, with a little fright at the sudden aggressiveness she had procured.

"Nowhere that I know of."

"Well—may I set up with you?"

What Have Feelings Got to Do With Cow-Pasture?

They advanced together now, Sefly's father whistling some tune that was heard before on earth, and, with a grin that of his son, they watched Sally bounding away. Once more, as she leaped a fence, she looked laughingly back. The old man whistled wildly out of tune. Sefly waved a hand.

"Now you 'shootin', Sefly! Shoot agin'!"

"I didn't say a word!"

"Well—it ain't too late! Go on!"

Now Sefly understood and laughed with his father.

"Nice gal, Sefly!"

"Yes!" admitted Sefly with reserve.

"Health!"

Sefly agreed to this, also.

"No doctor bills!" his father amplified.

Sefly said nothing.

"Entire orphan."

"She's got a xxyony!"

"Yes," chuckled the old man at the way his son was drifting into the situation—thinking about granny!

"but Sally owns the farm!"

"Uhuh!" said Sefly, whatever that might mean.

"And Sally's the boss!"

Silence.

"And granny won't object to any one Sally marries, anyhow—she doesn't!"

"Who said anything about marryin'?"

Sefly was speciously savage now—as any successful wooer might be.

"Nobody but me, Sefly!" said the old man with equally specious meanness. "Look how she has jumped a little fence. Like a three-year-old!"

Sally's a nice gal, Sefly—and the farm's fine too—her pasture-field and our corn-field. And she's kissing her hand backwards! At me or you, Sefly?"

Sefly said he didn't know. And he did not return the kiss—though he yearned to.

"Well, I bet a dollar that the first initial of his last name is Sephenjah P. Baumgartner, Junior."

"Well!" said Sefly with a great flourish, "I'm going to set up with her tonight!"

"Och—git out, Sefly!"—though he knew it.

"You'll see."

"No, I won't," said his father. "I wouldn't be so sure mean. Now!"

ing thaway—constant—constant—so the woods can't git in her. Then you ken put her in wheat after a while and git your money back!"

This drastic metaphor had its effect. Sefly began to understand. He said so.

"Now look here, Sefly," his father went on more softly, "when you git to this—and this—and this,—you went through his pantomime again, and it included a progressive caressing to the kissing point—"well, chust when you boss comfortable—huh?—mehby on one cheer, what I know—it's so long sense I done it myself—when you boss comfortable, at hor—chust at hor—aham!—what she'll take for the pasture-field! She owns you boss and she can't use boss you and the pasture. A bird in the hand is worth several in another feller's—not so?"

But Sefly only stopped and stared at his father. This, again, no one could understand.

"You know well enough I got no money to buy no pasture-field," said he.

"Gosh-amighty!" said the old man joyfully, making as if to would strike Sefly with his huge fist—a thing he often did. "And ain't got no money, to trade!"

"Nothing except the mare!" said the boy.

"Say—ain't you got no feelings, you idiot?"

"Oh—" said Sefly. And then: "But what's feelings got to do with cow-pasture?"

"Och! No wonder he wants to be an anchor, and wise the anchors stand—holding sings in his hands and on his head! He'd naker shivering on the brink and fear to launch away all his durn life—if some one didn't push him in. So here goes!"

This was spoken to the skies, apparently, but now he turned to his son again.

"Look a-yere, you young dummer-ux, feelings is the same to gals like Sally, as money is to you and me. You ken buy potatoes wess 'em. Do you understand?"

Sefly said that he did, now.

"Well, then, I'll try to buy that pasture field a sounsd times—"

Sefly started.

"Yes, that's a little bit a ho—mehby a dozen times. And at last Sally's daddy said he'd lick me if I efer said pasture-field agin', and I said it agin' and he licked me! He was a big man, and red-headed yit, like Sally. Now, look a-yere—you ken git that pasture field wess money and wessout price except you dam' feelings which ain't no other use. Sally won't lick you—if she is bigger—don't be a skeered. You got tons of feelin's you ain't got no other use for—don't waste 'em—they're good green money, and we'll git efer wess Sally's daddy for licking me yit—and someing on the side! Huh!"

At last it was evident that Sefly fully understood, and his father broke into that discordant whistle once more.

"A gal that ken jump a six-rail fence—and wessout no running start—don't let her git apart you!"

"Well, I'm going to set up with her tonight," said Sefly again, with a huge yawn. And the tune his father whistled as he opened the door for him sounded something like "I want to be an angel."

"But not to buy no pasture-land!" warned Sefly.

"Och, no, of course not!" agreed his wily old father. "That's chust one of my durn jokes. But I expect I'll take the fence down to-morrow! Say, Sefly, you chust marry the gal. I'll take keer the fence!"

But Sally Was the Angel.

It took Sefly a long time to array himself as he had threatened. And when it was all done you wouldn't have known him—you wouldn't have cared to know him. For his fine wavy hair was changed to an ugly brown by the patent hair-oil with which he had dressed it—and you would not have liked his fragrance. I trust, Sefly thought, I think it was. His fine, long throat was garroled within a scratched standing collar, his feet were pinched in creaking boots, his hands close-gauntleted in buckskin gloves, and he altogether incomparable, uncomfortable, and triumphant.

Down stairs his father paced the floor, watch in hand. From time to time he would call out the hour, like a watchman on a minaret. At last:

"Look a-yere, Sefly, it's about two inches apout noon—and by the time you git there—say, nefe, git another feller a chance to git there afore you or to leave after you!"

Sefly descended at that moment with his hat poised in his left hand. His father dropped his watch and picked it up.

Both stood at gaze for a moment.

FAVORS ARMOR IN MODERN WAR

A. Conan Doyle Suggests Use of Shields and Helmets.

PROTECT THE LIFE CENTERS

Noted British Author Says No Man Can Rush Over 300 Yards of Rough Ground in the Face of Machine Guns. Says Shields on Wheels Would Prove the Solution.

Sir A. Conan Doyle in a letter printed in the London Times advocates the use of armor in modern warfare.

"When Ned Kelly, the bushranger, walked unhurt before the rides of the police clad in his own handmade armor he was an object lesson to the world," writes "Sherlock Holmes."

"If the outlaw could do it why not the soldier?"

"Such actions as that of May 8, where several brigades lost nearly half their number in endeavoring to rush over the 800 yards which separated us from the German trenches, must make it clear that it is absolutely impossible for unprotected troops to pass over a zone which is swept by machine guns. Therefore you must either forever abandon such attacks or you must find artificial protection for the men."

Protect the Life Centers.

"It has always seemed extraordinary to the writer that the innumerable cases where a Bible, a cigarette case, a watch or some other chance article has saved a man's life have not set us scheming so as to do systematically what has so often been the result of a happy chance."

"As a man faces a hostile rifle his forehead and his heart are the only points presented which are certainly vital. The former would be protected by such a helmet as the French have now evolved. The second should be covered by a curved plate of lightly tempered steel, which need not be more than a foot in diameter. With this simple and light equipment the two centers of life are safe."

Favors Shield on Wheels.

"With these precautions the death rate should be greatly reduced from rifle and machine gun fire, as also from shrapnel. Nothing, of course, will avail against a direct shot burst, but granting that the individual life would be saved this does not bear upon the capture of a position, since so many would fall wounded that the weight of the attack would be spent before the stormers reached the trenches."

For this armor which will give complete protection is needed, and since, as your correspondents have shown, the weight of this is more than a man can readily carry, it must be pushed in front upon wheels."

Armor Plate and Platons.

Sir Conan Doyle pictures a great number of platoons, held together like the shields of a Roman tortoise, and pushed by the men, who crouch behind them. When one is disabled it can be readily dropped, and the gap closed. Others are fired sideways up close to the flank of the advance, and prevent an unflinching foe. There is not one tortoise, which would attract a concentrated fire of artillery, but each company or platoon forms its own.

These numerous armor plated bodies rush with small loss over the space which has already been cleared as far as possible of obstacles, and so have some chance of reaching the enemy's line, not as an exhausted fragment but as a vigorous storming party with numbers intact.

Must Not Fly Over Canada.

Aviators Warned by Governor Hammond on Advice of Secretary Lansing.

A warning to aviators of Minnesota to come flying over the international boundary line into Canada was recently issued by Governor Hammond.

Several times since the opening of the European war, aviators cruising along the border districts have crossed the line despite statements of Canadian officials that fall that the practice would not be tolerated.

Governor Hammond's attention was called to the matter in a letter from Secretary Lansing. Ambassador Sir Cecil Spring-Rice informed Secretary Lansing that a Canadian order in council was adopted Sept. 17, 1914, setting aside prohibited areas over which aeroplanes could not fly.

In future aviators flying these "no-fly" zones will be in danger of capture by Canadian soldiers, it was stated.

THE FIRST TELEGRAM.

It Was Not the Famous Message Sent by Morse's Daughter.

Hidden away in the archives of the Tennessee Historical society at Nashville is the account of the first actual message ever sent over a telegraph line. This dispatch differs materially from the solemn message that passed over the wire between Washington and Baltimore in the year 1844. It illustrates well, however, the lack of seriousness with which Mr. Morse's invention was taken when he first offered it to the world.

According to the account preserved at Nashville, Hon. Robert L. Caruthers of Lebanon, Tenn., was a member of Congress in 1843, and a member of the committee to which was referred Mr. Morse's application for an appropriation to build a telegraph line from Washington to Baltimore. Most of the members of the committee looked upon Morse as a visionary, and his proposal as impracticable.

On the last day of the session Morse went to the committee room and told them that he had stretched a wire to the top of the capitol building and had a young man up there. If they would write a message he would send it up, and the young man would bring them a copy of it. None of them believed it could be done. Judge Caruthers, however, pulled the envelope of a letter out of his pocket and wrote a message. Mr. Morse, who had his instrument with him, sat down and sent the message. In a few minutes the young man walked into the room with an exact copy of the message. The committee reported favorably, and recommended the appropriation.

The bill passed just before the adjournment. Some one went to Mr. Morse's boarding house to inform him that the appropriation was made. The daughter of the landlady went to Mr. Morse's room, waked him and gave him the welcome news. He said to her, "My daughter, you shall send the first message that goes from Washington to Baltimore." That promise was fulfilled when she sent the famous message: "What hath God wrought!"

Judge Caruthers was an ardent Whig, and in 1843 the Whigs were very angry with President Tyler, whom they accused of betraying the party. The message that Judge Caruthers sent from the committee room to the young man at the top of the Capitol was, "Tyler deserves to be hanged."—Youth's Companion.

OUR OLD LIBERTY BELL.

Text From Which the Inscription It Bears Was Taken.

For fifty years after that July day in 1776, when the old bell rang out its memorable message, it continued to be rung on every festival and anniversary. It was rung on Feb. 22, 1832, in honor of the centennial of the birth of Washington. While being tolled on the morning of July 8, 1835, in memory of Chief Justice Marshall, who had died two days before, the old relic suddenly cracked. On Washington's birthday, 1843, an attempt was made to ring it, but the bell has since been mute.

Finally it was removed from its position in the tower to a lower story, and later it was placed on its original embers in the vestibule of the statehouse in a prominent position immediately beneath where a large bell, presented to Philadelphia in 1800, now proclaims the passing hours.

To Isaac Norris, the speaker of the colonial assembly, is ascribed the honor of having originally suggested the prophetic words from Ecclesiastes xiv, 10, "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof," which were cast on the bell. The reason for the selection of this text at a time when there was not the slightest thought of a break with the mother country has been a subject of much conjecture, but the true reason is apparent when the full text is read, "And ye shall hallow the sabbath year and proclaim liberty throughout the land and to all the inhabitants thereof."

In selecting the text the Quakers and in mind the arrival of William Penn and their forefathers in America.—Christian Herald.

Color Legibility.

In London recently more than a thousand persons participated in tests that gave these average comparative distances at which signs of same size and lettering, but of different color combinations, were readable:

Black on yellow... 375 Yellow on black... 325 Green on white... 285 Black on white... 351 Red on white... 341 White on red... 320 Blue on white... 331 White on green... 341 White on blue... 367 White on black... 360

A Matter of Doubt.

"So Dolbey has decided to get married?"

"I merely said that he was going to get married. Whether the decision was made by Dolbey or his fiancée or some member of his or her family, I am in no position to state."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Real Test.

"I don't see how that little Mrs. Grumpy can seem so well satisfied with her husband. He never kisses her or shows her any mark like that of affection."

"Maybe not, but he gives her spending money without her ever having to ask for it."—Baltimore American.
